The cells have different openings depending on sun rays and absorptions. Wooden frames support the outer skin and interior steel bracing. Structural weight of the whole unit is transferred to the ground using rods.