

On the urban scale, the site becomes a platform to serve the context and will amplify the regional flows. The southern part of the site that is adjacent to Arbatax will be hosting vibrant activities that are in direct relation to city dwellers. Moreover, in the northern and southern immediate vicinity of the paper mill, new centers and plazas are foreseen and two open-air market places will regenerate the economical activities that the place once used to have.

New layers on a Time-Based strategy that integrates the existing assets on the site with a new program system.

The Systemic Relation
