

PARADISE

the persian word Pardis ( or the word Paradise which was driven from it's persian version) are actually coming from the word Paradaeza which has been used twice in Avesta ( the holly book of persian prophet Zoroaster) combined from the words Pairi meaning periphery and Daeza meaning drawing a wall. these two words combined together usually meant gardening the surrounding. since the Achaemenian period and after them persian gardens were existing all over the country.in that era these gardens could not be found in other countries such as Greece, the people of those countries were affected by these earthly heavens and called them Paradise.

Boostan

which is another name for garden is consisted of two persian words Boo meaning Aroma and Stan meaning the house and place of something so together these two words meant the house of aromas referring to persian gardens where a variety of flowers and aromas could be found.

the antiquity of persian gardens dates back to 8-9 thousand years ago. it can be said that they are as old as the Elamites civilization and that Persian gardens were the first earthly gardens.

royal garden of great Cyrus in Pasargade one of the few existing persian gardens before Islam

