

YAKH-CHAL is a pit for storing the ice just as AAB-ANBAR was used for storing water. ice was produced in midwinter and during the cold months and later on this ice was used during the hot season. applying all the climatic factors to produce the needed heat or coolness is among the basic principles of traditional architecture.

