In un mondo smart, fatto di immagini istantanee e video che si cancellano automaticamente dopo 24 ore, quando in un attimo possiamo sentirci sempre "anywhere" tra relazioni a distanza e conversazioni inter-mediate, dove manca però il tempo di soffermarsi a guardare per più di qualche minuto ciò che ci circonda, la domanda delle domande "chi siamo noi?" non può che avere come risposta "i nuovi nomadi".

E la Collection 1 me l'aveva confermato.

Ecco così che la fotografia, posta come attività umana quotidiana, inevitabile, alla stregua di quelle vitali, diventa incessante scambio attraverso strumenti e dispositivi di massa.

Qual è la prima cosa che facciamo al mattino subito dopo aver aperto gli occhi?

Raccogliamo immagini.

Visual is the starting point in our daily behavior.

Dopo sei mesi dalla prima Collection avevo bisogno di altre risposte e cosa, se non un altro esperimento, poteva essermi utile?

La Collection 2 è nata come esperimento sociale, volutamente non scientifico, approfondimento delle conclusioni che mi ero fatta con la Collection 1. Ma stavolta avevo bisogno di coinvolgere più persone e che, soprattutto, fossero in parte a me estranee. Ho deciso così di chiedere ai miei amici, partecipanti del primo esperimento, di inviarmi da uno a più contatti di loro amici.

Vi era una cosa però che avevo capito dal primo esperimento e la risposta di uno di loro alla mia richiesta di coinvolgerli nuovamente «Anna this is stalking or something similar. Instead of the big brother, we'll say 'Anna is watching you!」» esemplificava molto bene ciò che non aveva funzionato: la durata.

La Collection 1 con i suoi ventiquattro giorni era durata troppo e ciò si era riflettuto in una sempre minore partecipazione, nonostante i partecipanti fossero miei amici e quindi persone interessate a condividere le proprie vite; ho deciso così di ridurre ad una settimana la condivisione di foto per il secondo esperimento.

La maggior parte degli amici della Collection 1 mi aveva inviato i contatti di possibili partecipanti di questa seconda collection, raggiungendo così un campione di 40 persone sparse per il mondo.

Altro dato rilevante era conoscere la geolocalizzazione di ognuno di loro per evidenziare il mood dell'on the move che ci caratterizza come nomadi.

A dirla tutta non ero convinta che, una volta creato un gruppo WhatsApp con quaranta persone estranee tra loro, potesse funzionare perché molti erano i motivi che avrebbero spinto me in primis ad "abbandonare" un gruppo simile.

Eppure tutti, nessuno escluso, mi avevano risposto con un thumb up o altre emoticons di approvazione.

E così il 20 novembre è cominciata.

Le caption della Collection 2 di foto sono state qualcosa di inaspettato. Ciò che avevo chiesto di scrivere ogni volta che inviavano una foto era semplicemente il luogo in cui si trovavano al momento dello scatto, come informazione per potere meglio collocare le immagini nel loro contesto. Ma nel giro di poco mi sono accorta che i partecipanti aggiungevano anche riflessioni personali o informazioni extra alla foto, diventando così delle vere e proprie didascalie, arricchivano di ulteriore significato le immagini.

La didascalia, ovvero testo che accompagna una fotografia, aggiunge comunque "un secondo scarto rispetto al reale" (Lindens 1980: 252), diventa quasi un "messaggio parassita" (Barthes 1982) poiché la sua funzione di connotazione attribuisce inevitabilmente significati secondi all'immagine cui fa riferimento, li aggiunge, dà spazio a nuove interpretazioni, seppur indirizzandone la decodifica.

Sembra che oggi, sempre più, il testo viene dopo l'immagine e non il contrario, come è sempre avvenuto in passato. Ho voluto quindi inserirli perché completano le immagini, senza manca inevitabilmente qualcosa.

Whatsapp e i gruppi di cui ognuno di noi fa parte sono l'evoluzione dei vecchi album di fotografie che collezionavamo fino a poco tempo fa, ma soprattutto ci danno informazioni sugli aspetti nascosti della vita di tutti i giorni, rendendo visibile l'invisibile.

*Hi guys,
I'm Anna.
I'm gonna introduce myself cause not all of you already know me.*

you're actually part of this group cause I met you through mutual friends (Paola Cagnetta, Matteo Chimienti, Domenica Maiorino, Marco Piscopo, Virginia Ratti, Giorgia Popermhem, Chiara Villani, Raphael Pazoumian)

I asked them to help me with my Master Thesis Project in Communication Design at the Politecnico di Milano (Italy), asking them to give me some of their contacts who were probably interested to be part of it. I've already done this kind of "experiment" with them in April. And now I need to do it with more people but...

I will not steal a lot of your time, promise!

This part of my project consists of:

"Once a day, for one week at a random moment, you will receive a picture from me on this WhatsApp group.

You just reply taking a picture with your phone of your surrounding, whatever is in front of you, there and then.

Add a caption to your photo with the place you are in (BTW Milan, Italy.) or if you want you can also write something more."

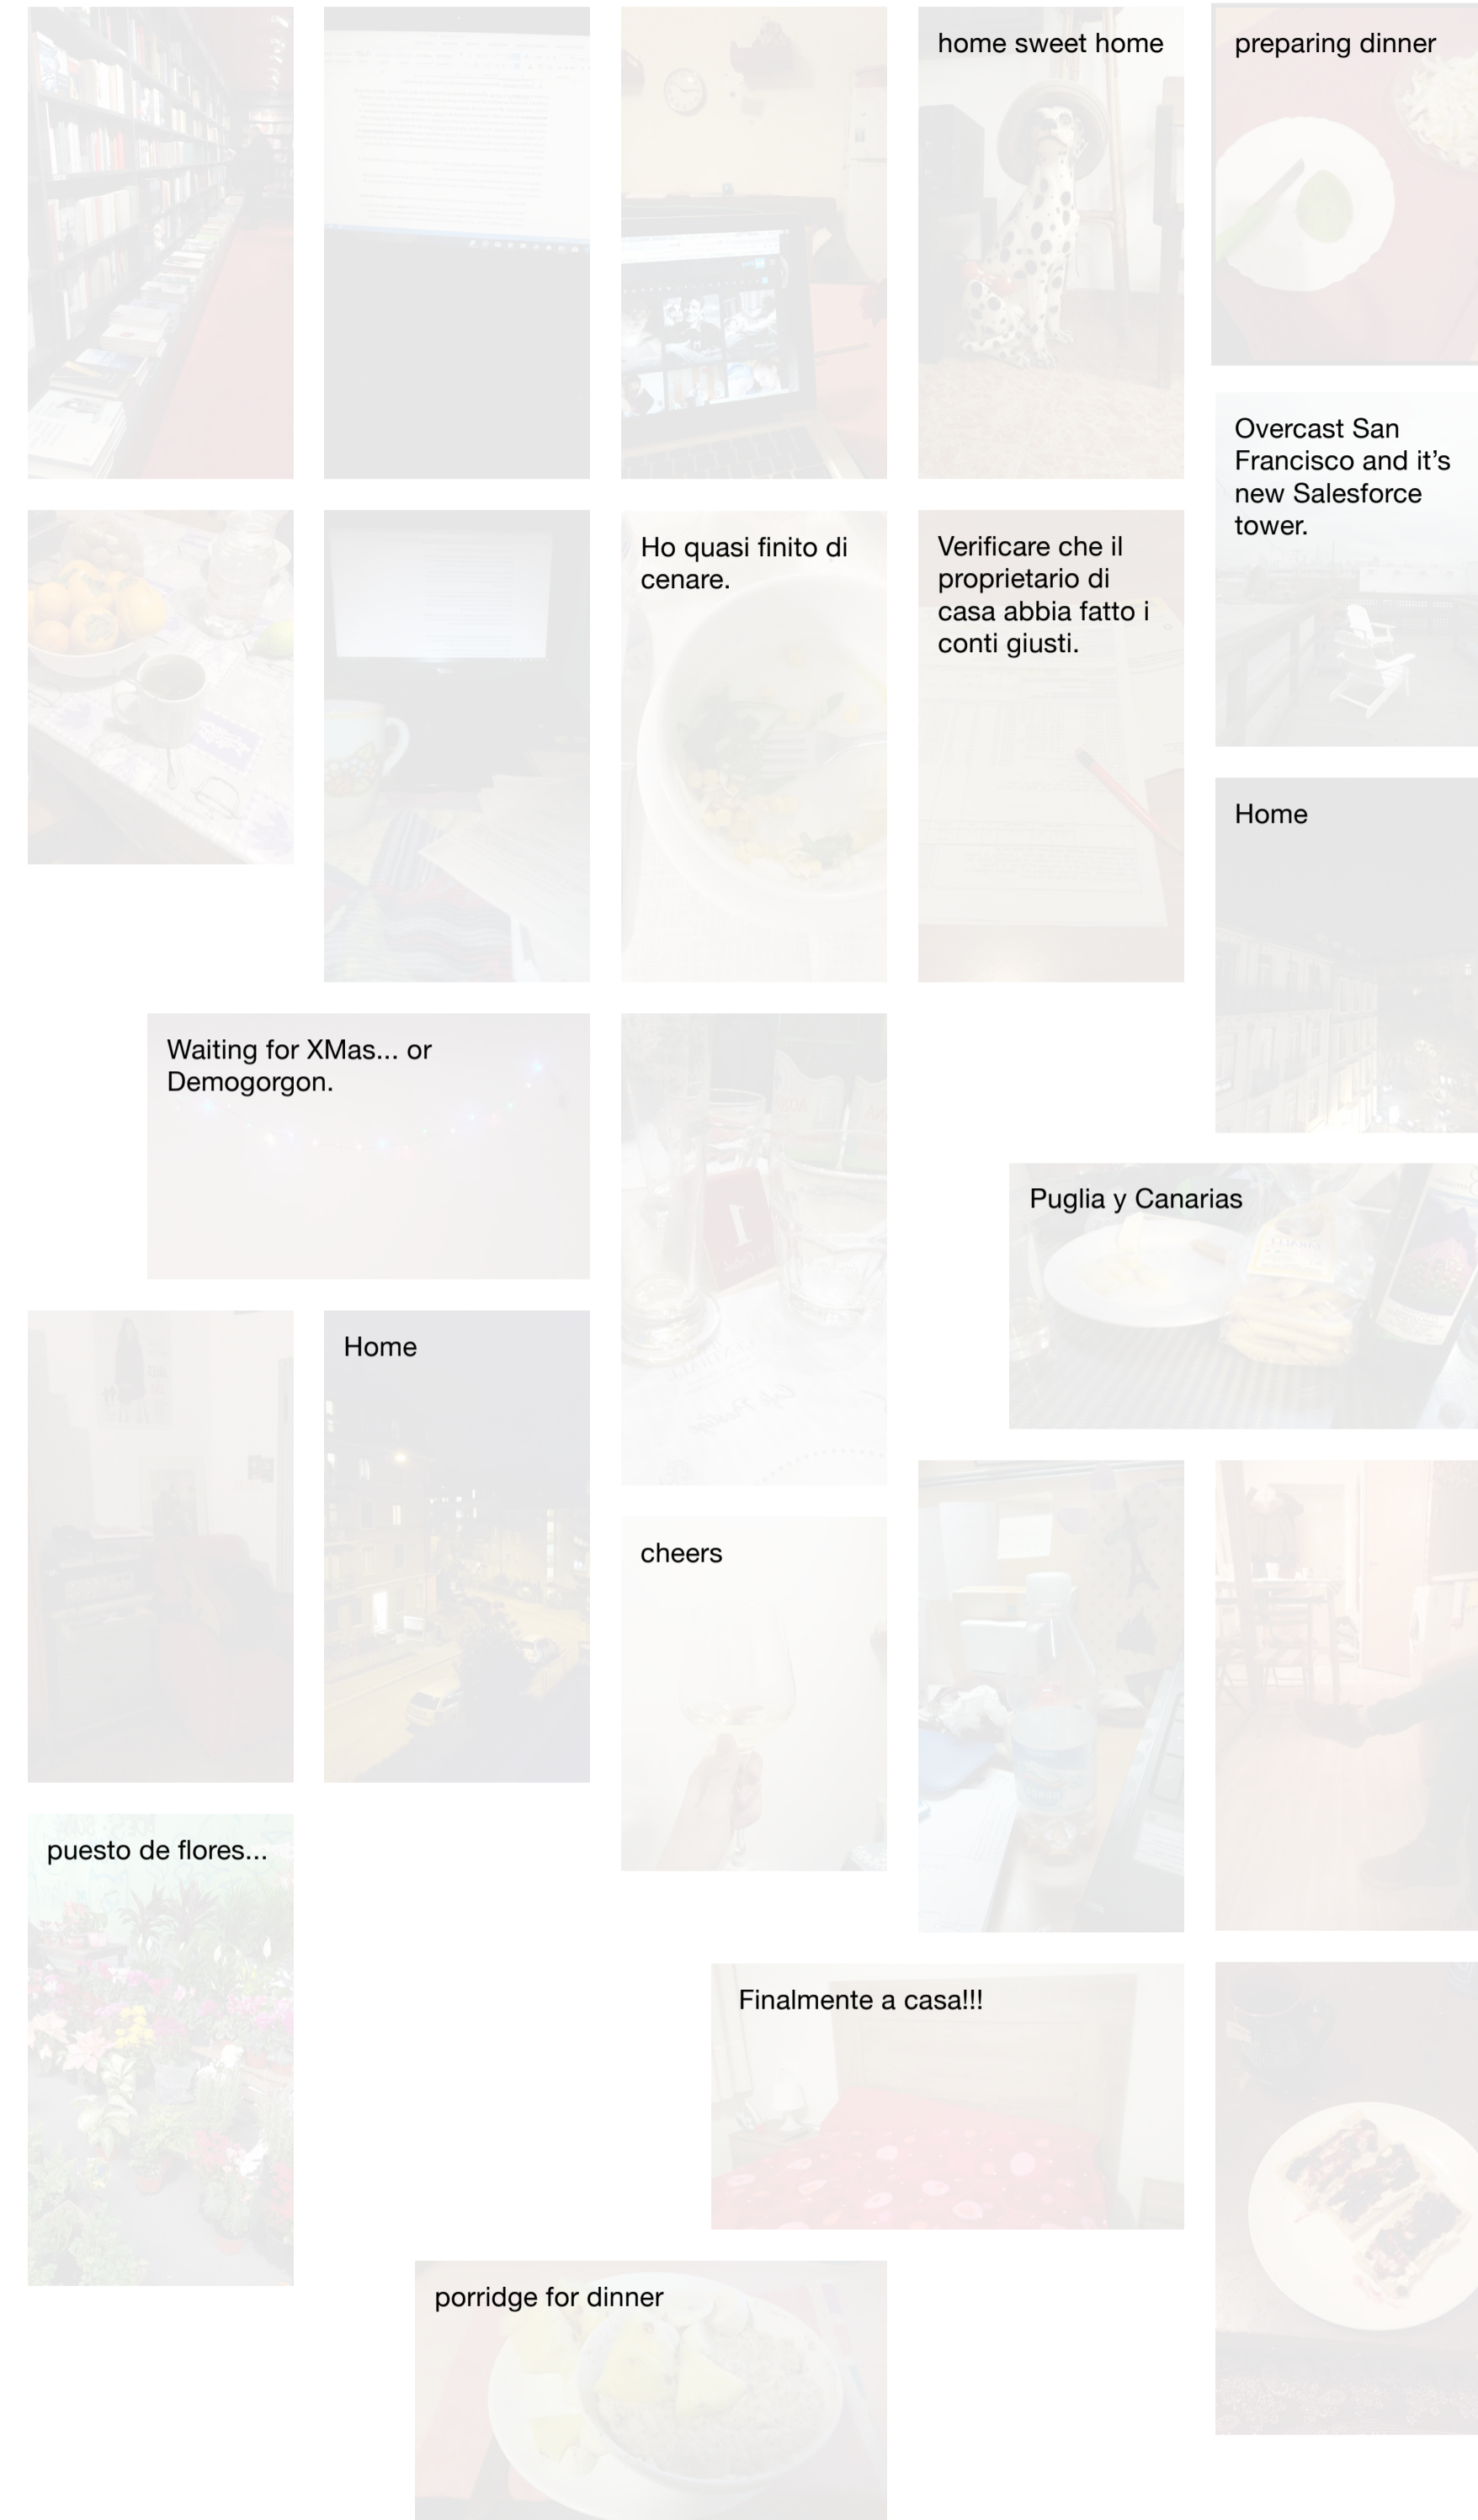

Fell free to use the group on your way, you can also introduce yourself, or not.

Just some technical /privacy info:

The only info I need to know about you is where you are on the moment your picture is taken. That's it.

No personal information (if you don't want to tell me).

So... Let's start then!
