

Milano Porta Romana Railway Yard

Milan is more and more connected to the global dimension, and it is the most open Italian city, where changes and different cultures are welcomed. The urban core of Milan must be seen in relation to an extensive territory, yet its character is very precise and comes from a long and complex history.

The project area is placed in a very important position that lies between two realities and different phases of realization that show very different characteristics, if not even opposite. To better understand these two steps of formation and genesis of the city it was very important to study the type of spaces that were found within the urban fabric.
